We know that only at the time of ancient Atlantis the human souls came down to the earth after their pilgrimage through the starry world.

A settlement resembled a garden in which the houses were built of trees with artfully intertwined branches.

They not only named things, but in their words was a power over things and also over their fellow-men.

The vehicles of the Atlanteans, which floated a short distance above the ground travelled at a height lower than that of the mountain ranges of the Atlantean period, and they had steering mechanisms by the aid of which they could rise above these mountain ranges.

During the Atlantean epoch the human body was soft, pliable and plastic, so that the souls that came down from the heavenly worlds could still form and shape their bodies.

Atlanteans had mechanisms in which they – so to speak – burned plant seeds, and in which the life force was transformed into technically utilizable power.
